

Cirtex Corp. Founder and CEO John Xie Named in BusinessWeek's 'America's Best Young Entrepreneurs'

NEW YORK, October 7, 2010 – Cirtex Corp., parent company of hosting leaders CirtexHosting and HostV, today announced its president and CEO, John Xie, has been named a finalist in BusinessWeek's prestigious 'America's Best Young Entrepreneurs' profile, which features the top 25 young entrepreneurs under the age of 25.

This year's BusinessWeek profile is its sixth annual roundup of America's most promising business leaders under the age of 25. Voting will determine BusinessWeek's America's #1 Young Entrepreneur for 2010, based on the entrepreneur who receives the most votes on the BusinessWeek website by October 20.

Xie, who was born in Shanghai and emigrated to New York with his family in 1998, started Cirtex in 2003 when he was just 13 years old. Today, Cirtex serves more than 10,000 clients and maintains a staff of 25 employees in the U.S., Canada, India, and Brazil. Revenue for Cirtex will exceed more than $2 million in 2010.

"I am honored to be recognized by BusinessWeek as a young entrepreneur. This company has consumed my life for the last seven years. It has been my passion and has kept me motivated. I started Cirtex when I was just 13 years old, and have built it into one of the most recognized hosting brands online today. It hasn't been easy, but in 2010, we're experiencing record growth and the future looks stronger than ever," said Cirtex Corp. President John Xie.
